September 20, 2024

Joanna A Diakos Kordalis Partner joanna.diakoskordalis@klgates.com

VIA ECF AND E-MAIL

T +1 212 536 4807 F +1 212 536 3901

Hon. Katherine Polk Failla
United States District Judge
United States District Court for the Southern District of New York
Thurgood Marshall
United States Courthouse
40 Foley Square
New York, NY 10007
Failla_NYSDChambers@nysd.uscourts.gov

Re: Balmuccino, a California Limited Liability Company v. Starbucks Corporation, a Washington Corporation, Civil Action No. 1:24-CV-06214

Dear Judge Failla:

I represent Defendant Starbucks Corporation ("Starbucks") and write, pursuant to Rule 4.A of Your Honor's Individual Rules to request a pre-motion conference with respect to our anticipated motion to dismiss the complaint filed by Plaintiff Balmuccino, LLC ("Balmuccino") on res judicata grounds, lack of personal jurisdiction, and for failure to state a claim.

Factual and Procedural Background

This is the third lawsuit brought by Balmuccino asserting that Starbucks misappropriated Balmuccino's purported trade secrets and breached alleged oral and implied contracts. As alleged in the complaint, Balmuccino began developing a line of coffee-flavored lip balms in 2016. (Compl. ¶ 8.) In October 2017, Balmuccino met in New York City with a senior executive of Starbucks, Mesh Gelman, and his assistant, and presented Gelman with a pitch deck and fully realized prototypes for the lip balm line. (Id. ¶¶ 1, 15.) At that meeting, Gelman questioned Balmuccino's representatives about the concept and product and Balmuccino disclosed detailed information about the product and process, including the names and locations of the suppliers and manufacturers involved in the development process. (Id. ¶¶ 1, 17-19.) Balmuccino asked Gelman to sign a non-disclosure agreement, but he declined, stating that the meeting and items discussed were confidential and that the relationship between the parties who had brokered the meeting should provide the necessary comfort Balmuccino was seeking. (Id. ¶ 16.) Two weeks later, Gelman informed Balmuccino he was leaving Starbucks to start his own consulting business. (Id. ¶21.) In 2018, Balmuccino learned that Starbucks had contacted one of its suppliers to request prototypes for Starbucks-branded lip balms and cases. (Id. ¶¶ 22-23.) The prototypes requested were the same as those that Balmuccino had presented to Gelman during the 2017 meeting. (Id.) In April 2019, Starbucks announced the launch of "The S'mores Frappuccino Sip Kit." (Id. ¶ 24.) The promotion reached California, where nearly ten percent of the retail stores of Starbucks are located and where the Balmuccino team resided and allegedly helped to drive sales for Starbucks. (Id. ¶¶ 25-26.)

¹ This letter's summary of the Complaint's factual allegations is solely for purposes of the contemplated motion to dismiss; Starbucks does not admit the truth of Balmuccino's allegations and reserves all rights.

On October 18, 2019, Balmuccino sued Starbucks for breach of contract, breach of confidence, and trade secret misappropriation in the California Superior Court for the County of Los Angeles. (Id. ¶ 29.) Starbucks moved to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction, which the Court granted. (Id. ¶ 33.) Balmuccino appealed the dismissal to the California Court of Appeal, which affirmed the Superior Court's dismissal for lack of personal jurisdiction holding that, notwithstanding "Starbuck's ubiquitous retail presence in California," Starbucks is a Washington corporation over which the court did not have personal jurisdiction in California. Balmuccino, LLC v. Starbucks Corp., 2022 WL 3643062, at * 1 (Aug. 24, 2022) (unpublished) (copy attached hereto). Relevant to the complaint filed here, the California Court of Appeal determined that the "uncontroverted evidence" before the court was that the "Sip Kit lip glosses, as well as the entire promotional campaign, were created, developed, and launched in Washington, not California" and that Balmuccino had not demonstrated that its controversy arises out of contacts by Starbucks with the State of California. Balmuccino, LLC, 2022 WL 3643062, at * 5. The California Court of Appeal issued its remittitur on October 26, 2022. (Compl. ¶ 35.)

On October 21, 2022, Balmuccino filed suit against Starbucks in the United States District Court for the Western District of Washington asserting similar causes of action as those asserted here, i.e., (1) breach of implied-in-fact contract; (2) breach of oral contract; (3) breach of confidence; (4) trade secret misappropriation under California's UTSA; (5) trade secret misappropriation under Washington's UTSA;² and (6) trade secret misappropriation under the Defend Trade Secrets Act ("DTSA"). (Compl. ¶ 36.) Starbucks moved to dismiss and argued, among other things, that the claims were time-barred. The Court determined that Washington law applied to Balmuccino's contractual and tort-based claims. Balmuccino, LLC v. Starbucks Corp., 2023 WL 4761447, at *6 (W.D. Wash. July 26, 2023) (copy attached hereto). The Court dismissed the claims as time-barred because it found that at the time the action was filed the applicable statutes of limitations had expired and that Balmuccino was not entitled to statutory or equitable tolling. Id. at *7; (Compl. ¶ 38). Accordingly, the Court dismissed Balmuccino's complaint with prejudice. Balmuccino, LLC, 2023 WL 4761447, at *11. Balmuccino appealed the Court's decision to the United States Court of Appeal for the Ninth Circuit, where it is presently sub judice. See Balmuccino, LLC v. Starbucks Corp., Case Number 23-355561 (9th Cir.); (Compl. ¶ 40.)

-

² The instant action purports to assert a common law trade secret misappropriation claim under New York law instead of the Washington UTSA claim. Otherwise, the claims asserted are identical to those asserted in the prior actions and are based on the same factual allegations.

The Complaint Should Be Dismissed

As a preliminary matter, the Court should dismiss the complaint on res judicata grounds. The doctrine of res judicata, "acts to prevent relitigation of claims that were or should have been decided among the parties in an earlier proceeding." Campbell v. Fernandez, 473 P.3d 675, 679, 14 Wash. App. 2d 769, 776 (2020) (internal citations omitted); Monahan v. New York City Dep't of Corr., 214 F.3d 275, 285 (2d Cir. 2000). For res judicata to apply there must have been a final judgment on the merits in the prior suit. Campbell, 473 P.3d at 679, 14 Wash. App. 2d at 776. Under Washington law, the "dismissal of the complaint with prejudice as time-barred has claim-preclusive and issue-preclusive effect." Id. at 679, 14 Wash. App. 2d at 777; see also Evans v. Heimann, No. C18-5473 MJP, 2022 WL 101953 (W.D. Wash. Jan. 11, 2022) (noting under Washington law, dismissal on statute of limitations grounds is a judgment on the merits). Here, the United States District Court for the Western District of Washington already determined that Washington law applies to the dispute that underlies this action and that the claims are time-barred under Washington law and dismissed the claims with prejudice. Accordingly, the Complaint should be dismissed on res judicata grounds.

Even if Plaintiff's claims were not barred by res judicata, which they are, additional grounds exist for dismissal.

First, the complaint should be dismissed pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(2) for lack of personal jurisdiction. To acquire personal jurisdiction over Starbucks, this Court must have either general or specific jurisdiction. There is no jurisdiction under either theory here. With respect to general jurisdiction, Starbucks is not at "home" in New York. BNSF Railway Co. v. Tyrrell, 581 U.S. 402, 413 (2017); CPLR 301. Starbucks is a Washington corporation with its principal place of business in Seattle, Washington. With respect to specific jurisdiction, none of the acts alleged by Plaintiff would bring this matter under this Court's long-arm jurisdiction. Indeed, as noted above, the lip glosses, as well as the related promotional campaign, "were created, developed and launched in Washington". Accordingly, any purported tortious conduct would have occurred in Washington, not New York.

Second, with respect to the trade-secret misappropriation claims, Plaintiff utterly fails to allege facts demonstrating that it has a trade secret. See My Mavens, LLC v. Grubhub, Inc., 2023 WL 5237519, at *20 (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 14, 2023) (granting motion to dismiss trade secret misappropriation claim where plaintiff failed to allege protectable trade secrets and noting that case law "militates strongly in favor of the conclusion that a new product idea that will be open and visible once brought to market cannot, as a matter of law, constitute a trade secret." (internal citations omitted). Balmuccino has not alleged what aspects of its fully developed lip balm line, which it alleges it presented to Starbucks, constitute a trade secret, the steps that it took to keep it a trade secret generally, the independent economic value derived from secrecy, etc.

For these reasons, Starbucks respectfully requests that the Court schedule a pre-motion conference and grant Starbucks permission to move to dismiss the Complaint.

Respectfully yours,

Joanna A. Diakos

Joanna A Diakos

Partner

JAD

KeyCite Red Flag - Severe Negative Treatment Unpublished/noncitable

2022 WL 3643062 Not Officially Published (Cal. Rules of Court, Rules 8.1105 and 8.1110, 8.1115) Only the Westlaw citation is currently available.

California Rules of Court, rule 8.1115, restricts citation of unpublished opinions in California courts.

Court of Appeal, Second District, Division 5, California.

BALMUCCINO, LLC Plaintiff and Appellant,

STARBUCKS CORPORATION,
Defendant and Respondent.

B308344 | Filed 8/24/2022

APPEAL from an order of the Superior Court of Los Angeles County, Rupert Byrdsong, Judge. Affirmed. (Los Angeles County Super. Ct. No. 19STCV37444)

Attorneys and Law Firms

Martorell Law, Eduardo Martorell and JoAnn Victor for Plaintiff and Appellant.

K & L Gates, Paul W. Sweeney, Jr., Kevin S. Asfor and Kate G. Hummel for Defendant and Respondent.

Opinion

RUBIN, P. J.

*1 Balmuccino, LLC appeals from an order granting Starbucks Corp.'s motion to quash service of summons for lack of personal jurisdiction. Starbucks's ubiquitous retail presence in California notwithstanding, it is a Washington corporation and the controversy between the parties is not related to and does not arise out of Starbucks's contacts with the State of California. We affirm.

FACTUAL AND PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

In 2016, California residents Samantha Lemole, Meredith Scott Lynn, Vince Spinnato, and Faith Miller began developing a line of coffee-flavored lip balms. In June 2017, Lemole's brother-in-law approached Starbucks's then-CEO about the lip balms. The CEO, who was an acquaintance, advised that Lemole should meet with Starbucks's Head of Product Development and Senior Vice President, Mesh Gelman. On June 19, 2017, Lemole emailed Gelman to coordinate a meeting. After a series of emails on logistics, on October 19, 2017, Lemole, Lynn, Spinnato and Miller flew from California to meet with Gelman and his assistant in Starbucks's New York offices.

At the meeting, the four pitched their idea and gave Gelman prototypes of the product, including 12 lip balms specifically aligned with Starbucks's top 12 flavors. Gelman declined to sign a nondisclosure agreement, kept the presentation and prototypes, and promised to explore the possibility of a partnership. Gelman left Starbucks's employment shortly after the meeting and nothing came of the meeting. The following year, on November 15, 2018, Lemole, Lynn, Spinnato and Miller formed Balmuccino as a California limited liability company.

On October 18, 2019, Balmuccino brought suit against Starbucks for breach of an oral or implied contract, breach of confidence, and trade secret misappropriation. The complaint alleged Starbucks reached out to one of Balmuccino's suppliers in 2018 to inquire about coffee-flavored lip balms and presented prototypes that were "identical" to those provided to Gelman during the pitch meeting. Balmuccino further alleged Starbucks manufactured and distributed coffee-flavored lip glosses in a nationwide promotion that benefitted Starbucks's retail sales in California.

Starbucks moved to quash service of summons for lack of personal jurisdiction. It asserted general or all-purpose jurisdiction was lacking because it is a corporation formed under the laws of the State of Washington with its headquarters in Seattle. Starbucks submitted evidence that all its corporate executive decisions, including product development and marketing, are made in Washington, where all of its senior officers reside and work.

Starbucks also denied it was subject to specific or case-linked jurisdiction because it did not purposely avail itself of the benefits of doing business in California in connection with the subject matter of the complaint; Balmuccino's claims did not arise out of Starbucks's contacts with California; and the assertion of jurisdiction over Starbucks would not comport with traditional notions of "fair play and substantial justice." It asserted its only in-person contact with Balmuccino's members occurred in New York. Nothing came of the meeting and there were no further communications between the parties after the October 19, 2017 meeting.

*2 Starbucks further explained its lip gloss promotion was not connected to Balmuccino's product. The Group Marketing Manager in charge of the promotion affirmed he knew nothing about Balmuccino's products or any pitch made to Starbucks about coffee-flavored lip balm. He explained Starbucks conducted a four-day social media contest in the United States and Canada from April 30 to May 3, 2019, in connection with the return of Starbucks's S'mores Frappuccino to its retail stores. Ten winners received a $500 Starbucks gift card, a "Sip Kit," consisting of four S'mores-flavored lip glosses, and other promotional items. ² None of the winners was located in California nor were the Sip Kits sold anywhere.

Balmuccino opposed the motion to quash, asserting Starbucks knew it was meeting with California residents, knew Balmuccino's products were manufactured in California, and had misappropriated trade secrets from a California company. The trial court granted the motion and dismissed the action for lack of personal jurisdiction. Balmuccino timely appealed.

DISCUSSION

It is undisputed Starbucks is a Washington corporation and Balmuccino does not contend that Starbucks is subject to general jurisdiction in California. Rather, it asserts California courts have specific jurisdiction over Starbucks, relying on Balmuccino's development of the product in California, its members' residence in California, its communications with Gelman and others at Starbucks while its members were in California, and the damage Starbucks caused to Balmuccino's business located in California. We conclude that this argument turns specific jurisdiction on its head: it is not the plaintiff's connections with the forum state that drive the inquiry. Our attention is directed to the defendant's contacts with California. "The primary focus of our personal jurisdiction inquiry is the defendant's relationship to the forum State." (Bristol-Myers Squibb Co. v. Superior Court of California, San Francisco County (2017) — U.S. —, 137 S.Ct. 1773, 1779, 198 L.Ed.2d 395 (Bristol-Myers).)

1. Legal Principles and Standard of Review

"A court of this state may exercise jurisdiction on any basis not inconsistent with the Constitution of this state or of the United States." (Code Civ. Proc., § 410.10.) The constitutional limit is found in the due process clause, which requires a defendant to have sufficient "minimum contacts" with the forum state to satisfy "traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice." (International Shoe Co. v. Washington (1945) 326 U.S. 310, 316.) Two kinds of personal jurisdiction exist: "general (sometimes called all-purpose) jurisdiction and specific (sometimes called caselinked) jurisdiction." (Ford Motor Co. v. Montana Eighth Jud. Dist. Ct. (2021) — U.S. —, 141 S.Ct. 1017, 1024, 209 L.Ed.2d 225 (Ford).)

"A court may exercise specific jurisdiction over a nonresident defendant only if: (1) 'the defendant has purposefully availed himself or herself of forum benefits' [citation]; (2) 'the "controversy is related to or 'arises out of' [the] defendant's contacts with the forum" '[citations]; and (3) ' "the assertion of personal jurisdiction would comport with 'fair play and substantial justice' " '[citations]." (Pavlovich v. Superior Court (2002) 29 Cal.4th 262, 269; accord Ford, supra, 141 S.Ct. at p. 1024 [citing cases].)

*3 "When a defendant moves to quash service for lack of personal jurisdiction, the plaintiff bears the burden of proving facts supporting the exercise of jurisdiction by a preponderance of the evidence. [Citation] When there is conflicting evidence, the trial court's factual determinations are not disturbed on appeal if supported by substantial evidence. [Citation.] When there is no conflict in the evidence, however, the question of jurisdiction is one of law and the reviewing court engages in an independent review of the record. [Citation.]" (Bader v. Avon Products, Inc. (2020) 55 Cal.App.5th 186, 192–193 (Bader); accord Vons Companies, Inc. v. Seabest Foods, Inc. (1996) 14 Cal.4th 434, 449.)

2. The Controversy Does Not Arise from Starbucks's Contacts with California

For purposes of this opinion, we will assume that, notwithstanding Starbucks's argument to the contrary, Starbucks has purposefully availed itself of the benefits of California through its extensive business in the state. 4

The Supreme Court most recently addressed specific jurisdiction in Bristol-Myers, supra, 137 S.Ct. at page 1773 and Ford, supra, 141 S.Ct. at page 1017.

In Bristol-Myers, over 600 plaintiffs brought claims in a consolidated action against the defendant pharmaceutical company in California, all alleging injuries caused by the defendant's drug. (Bristol-Myers, supra, 137 S.Ct. at p. 1779.) While some of the plaintiffs were California residents, most had no connection to California and did not allege that they obtained the drug in California, were injured there, or were treated there. Using a "sliding scale" approach, the California Supreme Court had reasoned that the defendant had extensive contacts with California and thus personal jurisdiction over the defendant as to the nonresident's claims could be based "'on a less direct connection … than might otherwise be required." (Id. at p. 1779.)

The Bristol-Myers court rejected this sliding scale approach, stating that for "specific jurisdiction, a defendant's general connections with the forum are not enough." (Id. at p. 1781.) "In order for a state court to exercise specific jurisdiction, 'the suit' must 'aris[e] out of or relat[e] to the defendant's contacts with the forum." (Id. at p. 1780, quoting Daimler AG v. Bauman (2014) 571 U.S. 117, 118.) Nor could personal jurisdiction over the nonresident plaintiffs' claims be based on California having personal jurisdiction over the resident plaintiffs' claims: "The mere fact that other plaintiffs were prescribed, obtained, and ingested [the drug] in California —and allegedly sustained the same injuries as did the nonresidents-does not allow the State to assert specific jurisdiction over the nonresidents' claims." (Bristol-Myers, supra, 137 S.Ct. at p. 1781.) The Bristol-Myers court found specific jurisdiction over the defendant as to the nonresident claims was improper because "[w]hat is needed—and what is missing here—is a connection between the forum and the specific claims at issue." (Ibid.) The plaintiffs were not residents of California, did not claim to have suffered harm in California, and "all the conduct giving rise to the nonresidents' claims occurred elsewhere." (Id. at p. 1782.)

*4 In Ford, the high court added a new layer to specific jurisdiction caselaw, figuratively putting in bold font the "or" in "must arise out of or relate to the defendant's contacts." (Ford, supra, 141 S.Ct. at p. 1025.) Ford arose from two products-liability suits where the plaintiffs were injured in car accidents involving Ford vehicles in Montana and Minnesota. (Id. at pp. 1025–1026.) Ford contended it was not subject to specific jurisdiction in either state, focusing on the "arise out of or relate to" second element. It asserted the two Ford vehicles at issue were not designed, manufactured, or originally sold in Montana or Minnesota. (Id. at pp. 1020–1021.) The Supreme Court rejected Ford's position that "only a strict causal relationship" would be sufficient to establish the requisite connection between the lawsuits and Ford's forum-directed activities. (Id. at p. 1026.)

The high court explained, the "arise out of" requirement speaks to causation while the "relate to" requirement "contemplates that some relationships will support jurisdiction without a causal showing." (Ford, supra, 141 S. Ct. at p. 1026.) Under this formulation, "[a] different State's courts may yet have jurisdiction, because of another 'activity [or] occurrence' involving the defendant that takes place in the State." (Ibid.) The court reasoned "that when a corporation has 'continuously and deliberately exploited [a State's market, it must reasonably anticipate being haled into [that State's] court[s]' to defend actions 'based on' products causing injury there." (Id. at p. 1027.) Because "Ford had advertised, sold, and serviced those two car models in both States for many years," there was a strong " 'relationship among the defendant, the forum, and the litigation'-the 'essential foundation' of specific jurisdiction." (Id. at p. 1028.)

The Ford court cautioned, however, "In the sphere of specific jurisdiction, the phrase 'relate to' incorporates real limits, as it must to adequately protect defendants foreign to a forum." (Id. at p. 1026.)

We encounter one of the "real limits" in this case. Balmuccino contends six points of contact connect the controversy and Starbucks to California: (1) it is home to the entirety of the Balmuccino team; (2) the ideas that led to the business venture arose in California; (3) the chemistry, ingredient lists and formulations were developed in California; (4) the product design and prototypes were developed in California; (5) the pitch points and pitch deck that were used in the New York meeting were created in California; and, (6) all of the communications with the Balmuccino team, other than when the parties met in New York, occurred while the team was in California.

None of the six points of contact confer specific jurisdiction over Starbucks because they only relate either to Balmuccino's contacts with California or Starbucks's contacts with Balmuccino, not with Starbucks's contacts with California involving the subject of this lawsuit. The Supreme Court has consistently rejected attempts to satisfy the defendant-focused "'minimum contacts' inquiry" solely through evidence of the contacts between the plaintiff and the forum state or the defendant's contacts with residents of that state. (Walden v. Fiore (2014) 571 U.S. 277, 284–285.)

*5 Specifically, the six points of contact identified by Balmuccino do not demonstrate that the alleged trade secret misappropriation "arises out of or relates to" Starbucks's contacts with California as required by Ford, Bristol-Myers, and a long line of Supreme Court precedent. Balmuccino cites to Starbucks's 3,034 stores in California but fails to identify how that retail activity is connected to the alleged trade secret misappropriation. Balmuccino has failed to show, even under the new formulation discussed in Ford, that its claims "relate to" Starbucks's California stores. That is because there is no forum-related activity or occurrence by Starbucks that took place in California. Like in Bristol-Myers, all the conduct giving rise to Balmuccino's claims occurred elsewhere: the disclosure of the trade secrets occurred in New York, Starbucks's development of the lip glosses occurred in Washington, and the lip glosses were awarded to residents of other states. The same analysis applies to Balmuccino's other causes of action as well.

Balmuccino attempts to link the controversy to Starbucks's retail presence in California through the "Sip Kit" lip glosses. According to Balmuccino, Starbucks "purposefully and successfully extract[ed] information from a California cohort and integrat[ed] trade secrets into a national promotion that was clearly meant, in part, to drive sales in Starbucks's huge market in California...."

The uncontroverted evidence before us is that the Sip Kit lip glosses, as well as the entire promotional campaign, were created, developed, and launched in Washington, not California. No Sip Kit lip glosses were awarded to anyone in California, and none was sold in California. To the extent Balmuccino alleges the four lip glosses, which were part of a much larger award that included a $500 Starbucks gift card and other promotional items, drove Starbucks's retail sales in California, Balmuccino has presented no evidence to support that claim. Neither we nor the trial court may speculate on the truth of these allegations. The undisputed evidence is the promotion was conducted over four days throughout the United States and Canada, not only California. From these facts, Balmuccino has not demonstrated its controversy is related to or arises out of Starbucks's contacts with the State of California.

DISPOSITION

The trial court's order is affirmed. Starbucks to recover its costs on appeal.

WE CONCUR:

BAKER, J.

KIM, J.

All Citations

Not Reported in Cal.Rptr., 2022 WL 3643062

Footnotes

- Before filing suit, the four individual members of the LLC assigned to Balmuccino their individual rights and claims against Starbucks. The only plaintiff is Balmuccino.
- The lip glosses consisted of three nude-brown-caramel shades, and one iridescent white shade. They were called Chocolicious Bliss, Marshmallow Glow, Campfire Spark, and Graham Glam.
- On appeal, Starbucks renews its objections to the declarations of two Balmuccino members Spinnato and Lynn. The record does not reflect that the trial court ruled on the objections. We will assume (without deciding) that the declarations were properly admitted. Even so, as we shall discuss, the trial court's ruling on the motion to quash was correct.

- Starbucks's argument on appeal tends to conflate the first and second elements of specific jurisdiction.
 "Purposeful availment" deals with the sufficiency of a defendant's overall conduct directed toward the forum state. The second element is concerned with the connection between the forum-directed activities and the claims asserted against the defendant in the plaintiff's complaint. The distinction was colorfully made by the United States Supreme Court in Ford. The issue there was whether two automobile accidents were sufficiently related to Ford's activities in the respective forum states. Ford conceded purposeful availment, which the Supreme Court noted was a "small wonder": "By every means imaginable—among them, billboards, TV and radio spots, print ads, and direct mail—Ford urges Montanans and Minnesotans to buy its vehicles, including (at all relevant times) Explorers and Crown Victorias." (Ford, supra,141 S. Ct. at p. 1028.) The same can be said about Starbucks.
- We do not know which facts the trial court found or considered important to its ruling because plaintiffs have not supplied us with a reporter's transcript, and there is no written ruling. In their absence, we presume the trial court findings are supported by the evidence and imply all findings necessary to support the judgment. (See Cal. Rules of Court, rule 8.120(b) ["[i]f an appellant intends to raise any issue that requires consideration of the oral proceedings in the superior court, the record on appeal must include a record of these oral proceedings in the form of" a reporter's transcript, an agreed statement, or a settled statement]; In re Marriage of Cohn (1998) 65 Cal.App.4th 923, 928; Estate of Fain (1999) 75 Cal.App.4th 973, 992.)

End of Document

© 2024 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

KeyCite Blue Flag – Appeal Notification

Appeal Filed by Balmuccino, LLC v. Starbucks Corporation, 9th Cir.,

August 24, 2023

2023 WL 4761447

Only the Westlaw citation is currently available. United States District Court, W.D. Washington, at Seattle.

BALMUCCINO, LLC, Plaintiff,
v.
STARBUCKS CORPORATION, Defendant.

CASE NO. 2:22-cv-01501 JHC | | Signed July 26, 2023

Attorneys and Law Firms

Eduardo Martorell, Pro Hac Vice, Martorell Law APC, Los Angeles, CA, Joel B. Ard, Ard Law Group PLLC, Bainbridge Island, WA, for Plaintiff.

Christopher M. Wyant, Pallavi Mehta Wahi, Shelby Renee Stoner, K & L Gates LLP, Seattle, WA, for Defendant.

ORDER GRANTING DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO DISMISS THE FIRST AMENDED COMPLAINT

John H. Chun, United States District Judge

I

INTRODUCTION

*1 This matter comes before the Court on Defendant Starbucks Corporation's Motion to Dismiss Plaintiff Balmuccino, LLC's First Amended Complaint. See Dkt. # 27. The Court has considered the materials filed in support of, and in opposition to, the motion, as well as the balance of the case file and the applicable law. Being fully advised, the Court GRANTS Starbucks's Motion to Dismiss and DISMISSES Balmuccino's First Amended Complaint (FAC) with prejudice.

II

BACKGROUND

A. Factual Background

Because this is a motion to dismiss, the Court "assume[s] the truth of the facts alleged in the complaint." Flaa v. Hollywood Foreign Press Ass'n, 55 F.4th 680, 685 (9th Cir. 2022) (quoting Ellis v. Salt River Project Agric. Improvement & Power Dist., 24 F.4th 1262, 1266 (9th Cir. 2022)).

Balmuccino is a California limited liability company doing business in Los Angeles, California. Dkt. # 23 at 1. Starbucks is a Washington corporation that conducts business worldwide. Id. As relevant to the motion at issue, over nine percent of Starbucks's retail stores are in California. Id. at 4.

As alleged in the FAC, Balmuccino began developing a line of coffee-flavored lip balms in 2016. Id. at 2. In or about June 2017, Samantha Lemole, one of Balmuccino's principals, informed her brother-in-law, Mehmet Cengiz Öz (known professionally as "Dr. Öz"), of Balmuccino's search for a joint venture partnership. Id. Öz then notified Howard Schultz, Starbucks's then-CEO, of Balmuccino's concept and product. Id. In response, Schultz suggested that Balmuccino reach out to Mesh Gelman, Starbucks's Head of Product Development and Senior Vice President. Id. Starbucks then arranged for a meeting with Balmuccino at Starbucks's New York corporate offices. Id.

On or about October 19, 2017, four Balmuccino representatives visited Starbucks's New York offices to meet with Gelman and Peter Ginsburg, ¹ Gelman's assistant. Id. During the meeting, Balmuccino presented Gelman with a pitch deck and fully realized prototypes for the lip balm line, designed specifically for Starbucks. Id. Gelman "extensively questioned" Balmuccino's team, making "detailed inquiries" into the concept and product. Id. at 3. In response, Balmuccino provided details about the product and the entire process, including the names and locations of the material suppliers and manufacturers involved in the development process. Id. Throughout the meeting, Ginsburg "took copious notes while Gelman listened intently." Id. When the meeting ended, Gelman asked if he could retain the pitch deck in order to "run the idea 'up the flagpole' and explore the possibility of a partnership or joint venture moving forward." Id.

At the meeting, Balmuccino also requested that Gelman sign a non-disclosure agreement. Id. at 2. Gelman declined to do so, stating, "that the meeting and the items discussed therein were completely confidential and that the relationship between [] Schultz and [] Öz, who had brokered the Meeting, should provide the necessary comfort and protections Plaintiff was seeking via the Non-Disclosure Agreement." Id. at 2–3. Two weeks later, and without mentioning the status of the pitch, Gelman informed Balmuccino that he was leaving Starbucks. Id. at 3.

*2 In 2018, Balmuccino received notice that Starbucks had contacted one of its suppliers to request prototypes for Starbucks-branded lip balms and cases. Id. Balmuccino also learned that the prototype specifications provided by Starbucks to the potential manufacturer were identical to those that Balmuccino had presented to Gelman during the 2017 meeting. Id. Around April 2019, Starbucks announced the launch of "The S'mores Frappuccino Sip Kit," a kit of four liquid lipsticks/glosses to celebrate the return of its S'mores Frappuccino. Id. The promotion soon reached California, where it allegedly helped to drive Starbucks's product sales, thereby injuring Balmuccino (presumably—though Balmuccino does not say much on this point—by depriving Balmuccino of sales or royalty payments from Starbucks). Id. at 4.

B. Procedural History

On October 18, 2019, Balmuccino filed suit against Starbucks for breach of contract and trade secret misappropriation in the California Superior Court for the County of Los Angeles. Id.; see also Balmuccino, LLC v. Starbucks Corp., No. 19STCV37444, 2020 Cal. Super. LEXIS 2811 (Cal. Super. Ct. June 23, 2020). The court held that it lacked personal jurisdiction over Starbucks and entered a Notice of Entry of Dismissal on July 17, 2020. Dkt. # 23 at 5. On September 10, 2020, Balmuccino filed a Notice of Appeal with the California Court of Appeal. Id. The California Court of Appeal affirmed the Superior Court's dismissal of the case for lack of personal jurisdiction on August 24, 2022, and issued its remittitur on October 26, 2022. Id.; see also Balmuccino, LLC v. Starbucks Corp., No. B308344, 2022 WL 3643062 (Cal. Ct. App. Aug. 24, 2022).

On October 21, 2022, five days before the remittitur was issued, Balmuccino filed suit in this Court. See Dkt. # 1. On January 20, 2023, Starbucks moved to dismiss Balmuccino's initial complaint under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6). Dkt. # 12. In the motion, Starbucks argued that Balmuccino lacks standing because its California LLC status was deemed inactive by the State of California as of August 3, 2021. Id. at 6. Starbucks also argued that Balmuccino's claims are time-barred and that at least two of its common-law claims are preempted under the Washington Uniform Trade Secrets Act (UTSA). Id. Balmuccino did not oppose Starbucks's first motion to dismiss. See generally Dkt. Instead, Balmuccino filed an amended complaint on February 13, 2023, one business day after the deadline for doing so. Dkt. # 15.

On February 21, 2023, the Court struck Balmuccino's amended complaint (Dkt. # 15) as untimely and granted Starbucks's motion to dismiss without prejudice. Dkt. # 17. But as the filing was only one day late, the Court found that it was not within the interests of justice to dismiss the matter with prejudice and stated in the order that Balmuccino could move for leave to file an amended complaint. Id. at 2. Balmuccino then filed an unopposed motion for leave to file a first amended complaint, which the Court granted on March 7, 2023. Dkt. ## 19, 21, 22.

On March 9, 2023, Balmuccino filed its First Amended Complaint, asserting six causes of action against Starbucks: (1) breach of implied-in-fact contract; (2) breach of oral contract; (3) breach of confidence; (4) trade secret misappropriation under California's UTSA, Cal. Civ. Code §§ 3426–3426.11; (5) trade secret misappropriation under Washington's UTSA, RCW 19.108; and (6) trade secret misappropriation under the Defend Trade Secrets Act (DTSA), 18 U.S.C. § 1836. Dkt. # 23.

On March 23, 2023, Starbucks filed a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss Balmuccino's First Amended Complaint. Dkt. # 27. Balmuccino responded on April 10, 2023, and Starbucks replied on April 14, 2023. Dkt. ## 28, 30.

Ш

DISCUSSION

A. Rule 12(b)(6) Motion to Dismiss

*3 Under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, a defendant may move to dismiss a plaintiff's complaint if it "fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted." Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6). To survive a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss, "a complaint must contain sufficient factual matter, accepted as true, to 'state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face.' "Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678, 129 S.Ct. 1937, 173

L.Ed.2d 868 (2009) (quoting Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 570, 127 S.Ct. 1955, 167 L.Ed.2d 929 (2007)). "A claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged." Id. In considering a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, the Court "presumes that the facts alleged by the plaintiff are true," Halet v. Wend Inv. Co., 672 F.2d 1305, 1309 (9th Cir. 1982), and will construe the complaint in the light most favorable to the plaintiff. See Livid Holdings Ltd. v. Salomon Smith Barney, Inc., 416 F.3d 940, 946 (9th Cir. 2005).

B. Choice of Law

As a threshold matter, the parties disagree about whether California or Washington law controls in this case. See Dkt. ## 27 at 12, 28 at 2. As discussed below, because Washington law presumptively applies and Balmuccino has not proven that both an actual conflict of law exists and California has the more significant relationship to its claims, the Court rejects Balmuccino's request to apply California law and instead resolves this matter under Washington law.

1. Legal standard

"When a federal court sits in diversity, it must look to the forum state's choice of law rules to determine the controlling substantive law." Patton v. Cox, 276 F.3d 493, 495 (9th Cir. 2002) (citing Klaxon Co. v. Stentor Elec. Mfg. Co., 313 U.S. 487, 496, 61 S.Ct. 1020, 85 L.Ed. 1477 (1941)). Under Washington State's choice of law rules, Washington law presumptively applies unless: (1) there is an effective choice of law by the parties to apply another state's law; (2) Washington law conflicts with federal law; or (3) there is an actual conflict between Washington law and the law of another state and the other state bears a more significant relationship to the claims. See Tilden-Coil Constructors, Inc. v. Landmark Am. Ins. Co., 721 F. Supp. 2d 1007, 1013 (W.D. Wash. 2010) (presumption that Washington law applies); Shanghai Com. Bank Ltd. v. Chang, 189 Wash. 2d 474, 484-85, 404 P.3d 62 (2017) (effective choice of law); Butler v. Nat'l Cmty. Renaissance of Cal., 766 F.3d 1191, 1198 (9th Cir. 2014) (conflict with federal law); Erwin v. Cotter Health Ctrs., 161 Wash. 2d 676, 692, 167 P.3d 1112 (2007) (actual conflict of law). Because the parties do not suggest that they effectively chose another state's law (say, by contract) or that Washington law conflicts with federal law, it is this third exception—an actual conflict with another state's laws—that is at issue here.

Under Washington State's choice of law rules, an "actual conflict" exists if the Washington law is "fundamentally incompatible" with the other state's law. Burnside v. Simpson Paper Co., 123 Wash. 2d 93, 100, 864 P.2d 937 (1994). If a party establishes an actual conflict for a tort or contract claim, Washington courts apply the "most significant relationships" test to resolve the choice of law problem. See Canron, Inc. v. Fed. Ins. Co., 82 Wash. App. 480, 492, 918 P.2d 937 (1996) (Washington courts apply the most significant relationships test to contract claims); Johnson v. Spider Staging Corp., 87 Wash. 2d 577, 580, 555 P.2d 997 (1976) (Washington courts apply the most significant relationships test to tort claims). For contract claims, the test requires courts to consider these contacts:

- (a) the place of contracting,
- (b) the place of negotiation of the contract,
- *4 (c) the place of performance,
- (d) the location of the subject matter of the contract, and
- (e) the domicil[e], residence, nationality, place of incorporation and place of business of the parties.

Canron, 82 Wash. App. at 492, 918 P.2d 937 (quoting Restatement (Second) Conflict of Laws § 188(2) (1971)). For tort claims, courts consider:

- (a) the place where the injury occurred,
- (b) the place where the conduct causing the injury occurred,
- (c) the domicile, residence, nationality, place of incorporation and place of business of the parties, and
- (d) the place where the relationship, if any, between the parties is centered.

Johnson, 87 Wash. 2d at 581, 555 P.2d 997 (quoting Restatement (Second) Conflict of Laws § 145(2) (1971)). In applying the test, Washington courts do not merely count contacts. Id. Rather, they evaluate the contacts according to their relative importance, considering which contacts are most significant and where they might be found. Id.; see also Restatement (Second) Conflict of Laws §§ 145, 188 (1971).

2. Actual conflict

Balmuccino says that the Court must engage in a choice of law analysis because there is an actual conflict between California and Washington law in their treatment of breach of confidence claims and equitable tolling. ² See Dkt. # 28 at 2–3.

The Court is not convinced that Balmuccino's breach of confidence claim presents an actual conflict of law, as both the Washington and California UTSA preempt tort claims for breach of confidence when (as here) the breach of confidence claim arises out of the same nucleus of facts as a trade secret misappropriation claim. 3 Compare Ed Nowogroski Ins., Inc. v. Rucker, 88 Wash. App. 350, 445 n.5, 944 P.2d 1093 (1997) (affirming the Washington UTSA displaces conflicting tort laws pertaining to trade secret misappropriation.), and RCW 19.108.900(1) ("This chapter displaces conflicting tort, restitutionary, and other law of this state pertaining to civil liability for misappropriation of a trade secret."), with K.C. Multimedia, Inc. v. Bank of Am. Tech. & Operations, Inc., 171 Cal. App. 4th 939, 958, 90 Cal.Rptr.3d 247 (2009) (finding the California UTSA "preempts common law claims that are 'based on the same nucleus of facts as the misappropriation of trade secrets claim for relief" ") (quoting Digit. Envoy, Inc. v. Google, Inc., 370 F. Supp. 2d 1025, 1035 (N.D. Cal. 2005)), and Cal. Civ. Code § 3426.7(b) (no exception for torts based on trade secret misappropriation).

*5 There may, however, be an actual conflict of law between Washington's and California's equitable tolling doctrines. In Washington, equitable tolling is permitted:

[1] when justice requires. The predicates for equitable tolling are [2] bad faith, deception, or false assurances by the defendant and [3] the exercise of diligence by the plaintiff. In Washington equitable tolling is appropriate [4] when consistent with both the purpose of the statute providing the cause of action and the purpose of the statute of limitations.

Millay v. Cam, 135 Wash. 2d 193, 206, 955 P.2d 791 (1998) (internal citations omitted) (citing Finkelstein v. Security Properties, Inc., 76 Wash. App. 733, 739–40, 888 P.2d 161 (1995); Douchette v. Bethel Sch. Dist. No. 403, 117 Wash. 2d 805, 812, 818 P.2d 1362 (1991)); see also Fowler v. Guerin, 200 Wash. 2d 110, 119, 515 P.3d 502 (2022) (reiterating the test provided in Millay). In California, the requirements for equitable tolling are: "timely notice, and lack of prejudice, to the defendant, and reasonable and good faith conduct on the part of the plaintiff." Addison v. State of California, 21 Cal. 3d 313, 319, 578 P.2d 941, 146 Cal.Rptr. 224 (1978).

Washington's test thus contains an additional element—a "bad actor" requirement—which is not included in California's test for equitable tolling. ⁴ Since Washington courts require satisfaction of an additional (and sometimes case-dispositive) element before equitably tolling a statute of limitations, there may be a conflict of law between California's and Washington's equitable tolling doctrines. Thus, the Court will assume for the purposes of this motion that Balmuccino has established an actual conflict of law and proceed to the most significant relationships analysis to determine which state's laws apply.

3. Most significant relationships test

Assuming that Balmuccino has established an actual conflict of law, Washington law applies because Balmuccino has not shown that California bears a more significant relationship to its contract and tort claims. Thus, the Court must apply Washington law to resolve this case.

a. Contract claims

The most significant relationships test does not show that California has the more significant relationship to Balmuccino's contract claims. Since the pitch meeting between Balmuccino and Starbucks occurred in New York, the first two prongs of the test (place of contracting and place of negotiation of the contract) do not help decide whether Washington or California law applies. Similarly, analysis of the fifth prong (the domicile, residence, nationality, place of incorporation and place of business of the parties) is a draw, as Starbucks is a Washington corporation and Balmuccino is registered in California. Consequently, the Court's choice of law analysis is guided exclusively by the third and fourth prongs (place of performance and location of the subject matter of the contract).

*6 In considering the third and fourth prongs, the Court finds that Washington, not California, has the more significant relationship to this case. Because the contract concerned the sale of coffee-flavored lip balms by Starbucks, both the place of performance and the location of the contract's subject matter relate more to Washington. According to the complaint, the implied-in-fact and oral contracts barred Starbucks from releasing coffee-flavored lip balms without compensating Balmuccino or obtaining its consent. Dkt. # 23 at 6–7. As a Washington-based company, Starbucks's Washington employees would have performed the contract or breached the contract in Washington. At minimum, these factors do not rebut the presumptive application of Washington law. See Tilden-Coil Constructors, 721 F. Supp. 2d at 1013 (unless there is both an actual conflict and the other state bears a more significant relationship to the claims, "Washington law presumptively applies"). Starbucks's "sizeable retail presence in California," see Dkt. # 28 at 9, also does not rebut this presumption, as this fact does not tie the place of performance or location of the contract's subject matter to California more than any other state in which Starbucks has significant operations.

The California courts' dismissal of this case for lack of personal jurisdiction also cuts strongly against Balmuccino's argument that California has the more significant relationship to its claims. As relevant here, the California Court of Appeal concluded that the alleged points of contact between Starbucks and California did not "involv[e] the subject of this lawsuit" nor demonstrate that "the alleged trade secret misappropriation 'arises out of or relates to' Starbucks's contacts with California." Balmuccino, 2022 WL 3643062, at *5. The court added that "there is no forum-related activity or occurrence by Starbucks that took place in California," as "[t]he uncontroverted evidence before us is that the Sip Kit lip glosses, as well as the entire promotional campaign, were created, developed, and launched in Washington, not California." Id.

In light of these findings, Balmuccino has not overcome the presumptive application of Washington law. See Tilden—Coil Constructors, 721 F. Supp. 2d at 1013. Since the Court is not convinced that California bears the more significant relationship to this case, it declines to apply California law to Balmuccino's contract claims.

b. Tort claims

The most significant relationships test also shows that Washington law should govern Balmuccino's tort claims. The third and fourth prongs of the most significant relationships test for tort claims (the domicile, residence, nationality, place of incorporation and place of business of the parties and the place where the relationship, if any, between the parties is centered) provide little help here: Starbucks is a Washington corporation, Balmuccino is registered in California, and the relationship between Starbucks and Balmuccino does not appear to be centered in any one location. Therefore, the tort choice of law analysis is guided by the first and second prongs (the place where the injury occurred and the place where the conduct causing the injury occurred).

In considering the first and second prongs in light of their relative importance, the Court finds that Washington, not California, has the more significant relationship to Balmuccino's tort claims. Although Balmuccino's alleged injury occurred in California, Washington was the place where the conduct causing the injury occurred. See Balmuccino, 2022 WL 3643062, at *5 ("[t]he uncontroverted evidence before us is that the Sip Kit lip glosses, as well as the entire promotional campaign, were created, developed, and launched in Washington, not California."). Because this action centers on Starbucks's alleged misconduct, the Court views the "place where the conduct causing the injury occurred" to be a more significant contact than "the place where the injury occurred." See, e.g., Kelley v. Microsoft Corp., 251 F.R.D. 544, 552 (W.D. Wash. 2008) (finding that the place of injury is of less importance than the place where the conduct causing the injury occurred, especially when the defendant's conduct caused harm in multiple states); Bryant v. Wyeth, 879 F. Supp. 2d 1214, 1221–22 (W.D. Wash. 2012) (finding that in cases of fraud and misrepresentation, the place of injury is often fortuitous and thus of lesser importance than the place where the conduct causing the injury occurred); White v. Symetra Assigned Benefits Serv. Co., No. 20-1866 MJP, 2022 WL 2983943, at *4 (W.D. Wash July 28, 2022) (finding the location where the conduct causing the injury occurred to be more important because plaintiffs' claims focus on defendants' conduct arising out of Washington). The Court is thus not convinced that California bears the more significant relationship to Balmuccino's tort claims so will resolve the entirety of this matter under Washington law.

C. Dismissal of the Claims as Time-Barred

*7 It is uncontested that all of Balmuccino's causes of action have a three-year statute of limitations period. See generally Dkt. # 28; see also Dkt. # 27 at 16–17; RCW 4.16.080(3); RCW 4.16.080(2); Cal. Civ. Code § 3426.6; RCW 19.108.060; 18 U.S.C. § 1836(d). It is also uncontested that Balmuccino filed suit in this Court more than three years after learning of Starbucks's alleged trade secret misappropriation. ⁶ See generally Dkt. ## 23, 27, 28.

Since Balmuccino filed this action after the applicable statutes of limitations expired, all of Balmuccino's claims are time-barred unless Balmuccino can prove that the statutes tolled. Even reading Balmuccino's complaint with the required liberality, as discussed below, the Court concludes that Balmuccino is not entitled to statutory or equitable tolling under Washington law. Thus, the Court must dismiss Balmuccino's First Amended Complaint under Rule 12(b)(6) for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted.

1. Legal standard

To decide whether an action is time-barred, the Court "must determine whether the running of the statute is apparent on the face of the complaint." Bakalian v. Cent. Bank of Republic of Turkey, 932 F.3d 1229, 1233 (9th Cir. 2019) (quoting Huynh v. Chase Manhattan Bank, 465 F.3d 992, 997 (9th Cir. 2006)). When a party brings a motion to dismiss based on the running of the statute of limitations, the motion may be granted "if the assertions of the complaint, read with the required liberality, would not permit the plaintiff to prove that the statute was tolled." Jablon v. Dean Witter & Co., 614 F.2d 677, 682 (9th Cir. 1980); see also Supermail Cargo, Inc. v. United States, 68 F.3d 1204, 1207 (9th Cir. 1995) ("[A] complaint cannot be dismissed unless it appears beyond doubt that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts that would establish the timeliness of the claim."). A statute of limitations may be tolled statutorily or via the jurisdiction's equitable tolling doctrine.

2. Statutory tolling

Balmuccino is not entitled to statutory tolling under Washington law. See Miles v. Shanghai Zhenhua Port Mach. Co., Ltd., No. C08-5743 FDB, 2009 WL 5067513, at *2 (W.D. Wash. Dec. 17, 2009) ("In diversity actions, federal courts generally apply state statutes related to the commencement and tolling of statutes of limitations."). In Washington, statutory tolling is governed in part by RCW 4.16.170 and RCW 4.16.180. See Dowell Co. v. Gagnon, 36 Wash. App. 775, 776, 677 P.2d 783 (1984). As relevant here, RCW 4.16.170 reads:

For the purpose of tolling any statute of limitations an action shall be deemed commenced when the complaint is filed or summons is served whichever occurs first. If service has not been had on the defendant prior to the filing of the complaint, the plaintiff shall cause one or more of the defendants to be served personally, or commence service by publication within ninety days from the date of filing the complaint. If the action is commenced by service on one or more of the defendants or by publication, the plaintiff shall file the summons and complaint within ninety days from the date of service. If following service, the complaint is not so filed, or following filing, service is not so made, the action shall be deemed to not have been commenced for purposes of tolling the statute of limitations.

*8 Balmuccino asserts that "[p]ursuant to RCW 4.16.170, the timely filing of a complaint, coupled, as here, with the timely service of summons, tolls the running of the statute of limitations as of the date of filing, on October 18, 2019." Dkt. # 28 at 6. But Balmuccino misunderstands the statute. As interpreted by the Washington courts, the commencement of another action, even involving the same purpose and the same parties, does not statutorily toll the limitations period in Washington. Dowell, 36 Wash. App. at 775-76, 677 P.2d 783; see also Masse v. Clark, No. C06-5375 RBL-KLS, 2007 WL 1468820, at *7 (W.D. Wash. May 18, 2007) ("The tolling provisions of RCW 4.16.170 do not apply to previously filed actions."). This is because "the complaint" in RCW 4.16.170 refers to the complaint "filed in the action before the court, not a complaint independently filed." Dowell, 36 Wash. App. at 776, 677 P.2d 783. Since the relevant complaint here for RCW 4.16.170 purposes was filed by Balmuccino on October 21, 2022 (Dkt. # 1), Balmuccino has not shown that RCW 4.16.170 tolled the statutes of limitations as of October 18, 2019. Nor does Balmuccino allege that its claims are statutorily tolled by RCW 4.16.180. See generally Dkt. # 28. The Court thus rejects Balmuccino's assertion that its claims are timely due to statutory tolling.

3. Equitable Tolling

Balmuccino is not entitled to equitable tolling under Washington law. ⁷ Washington courts apply equitable tolling:

[1] when justice requires. The predicates for equitable tolling are [2] bad faith, deception, or false assurances by the defendant and [3] the exercise of diligence by the plaintiff. In Washington equitable tolling is appropriate [4] when consistent with both the purpose of the statute providing the cause of action and the purpose of the statute of limitations.

Millay, 135 Wash. 2d at 206, 955 P.2d 791 (internal citations omitted) (citing Finkelstein, 76 Wash. App. at 739–40, 888 P.2d 161; Douchette, 117 Wash. 2d at 812, 818 P.2d 1362); see also Fowler, 200 Wash. 2d at 119, 515 P.3d 502 (reiterating the test provided in Millay). The party asserting equitable tolling bears the burden of proof. See Price v. Gonzalez, 4 Wash. App. 2d 67, 75, 419 P.3d 858 (2018). Although equitable tolling is permitted in Washington, its courts have "cautioned against broadly applying equitable tolling in a manner that 'would substitute for a positive rule established by the legislature a variable rule of decision based upon individual ideas of justice." Fowler, 200 Wash. 2d at 119, 515 P.3d 502 (quoting Leschner v. Dep't of Lab. & Indus., 27 Wash. 2d 911, 926, 185 P.2d 113 (1947)). As a result, Washington "[c]ourts typically permit equitable tolling to occur only sparingly" and decline to extend it to "garden variety claim[s] of excusable neglect." Benyaminov v. City of Bellevue, 144 Wash. App. 755, 761, 183 P.3d 1127 (2008) (quotation marks omitted) (quoting State v. Duvall, 86 Wash. App. 871, 875, 940 P.2d 671 (1997)).

Balmuccino has not satisfied the standard for equitable tolling in Washington. As stated above, one "predicate[]" for equitable tolling is "bad faith, deception, or false assurances by the defendant." Fowler, 200 Wash. 2d at 119, 515 P.3d 502 (citing Millay, 135 Wash. 2d at 206, 955 P.2d 791). Washington courts construe this requirement as a fairly strict precondition for equitable tolling. In Fowler, the Washington Supreme Court observed that it had "explained [in Douchette] that the plaintiff was not entitled to equitable tolling because she 'failed to act diligently in pursuing her legal remedy' and because she 'failed to show bad faith, deception or false assurances on the part of the [defendant]." Id. at 123, 515 P.3d 502 (emphasis in original) (quoting Douchette, 117 Wash. 2d at 812, 818 P.2d 1362). The Washington Supreme Court then stated that its decision in Douchette "clarified that proof of both predicates is necessary to justify equitable relief: 'In the absence of bad faith on the part of the defendant and reasonable diligence on the part of the plaintiff, equity cannot be invoked." Id. (quoting Douchette, 117 Wash. 2d at 812, 818 P.2d 1362). The Washington Supreme Court concluded by observing that *9 [t]he four-part standard set forth in Millay remains the standard for equitable tolling of statutes of limitations in civil actions under Washington law. Washington courts must evaluate each part of this standard in light of the particular facts of each case and should equitably toll the applicable statute of limitations only when all four parts of the Millay standard are satisfied.

Id. at 124–25 (emphasis added).

Balmuccino does not allege—in either its First Amended Complaint or in its response to Starbucks's motion to dismiss—that Starbucks acted in bad faith, engaged in deception, or made any false assurances. See generally Dkt. ## 23, 28. Accordingly, Balmuccino has not satisfied one of the predicate conditions for equitable tolling under Washington law. See Fowler, 200 Wash. 2d at 123, 515 P.3d 502. Balmuccino also cites no case in which a Washington court equitably tolled a statute of limitations under Washington's equitable tolling doctrine based on the filing of a complaint in another lawsuit. The Court thus rejects Balmuccino's assertion that its claims are timely due to equitable tolling.

Rather than argue that Starbucks indeed acted in bad faith, Balmuccino argues that Washington courts previously applied a different equitable tolling standard which did not include a "bad actor" requirement. See Dkt. # 23 at 8 ("Fowler's 'bad actor' requirement should not be retroactively applied."). This argument, however, relies on a false premise. Contrary to Balmuccino's claim, Fowler did not establish a new standard for equitable tolling in Washington. Rather, the case "reiterat[ed] the four conditions" for equitable tolling which the courts have applied "consistently" since Millay, a 1998 Washington Supreme Court case. Fowler, 200 Wash. 2d at 113, 120, 515 P.3d 502. Balmuccino's citation to and reliance on federal district court cases before Fowler is also mistaken, as the cited cases involve the courts applying federal tolling law to federal claims, not Washington tolling law to claims brought under Washington law. See e.g., Abeyta v. BNSF Ry Co., No. 2:17-CV-0350-TOR, 2018 WL 327283 (E.D.

Wash. Jan. 8, 2018) (employee brought action under Federal Employers' Liability Act); Nelson v. United States, No. C05-643JLR, 2005 WL 1838620 (W.D. Wash. Aug. 1, 2005) (individual filed petition to quash IRS summons); Figueroa v. BNSF Ry. Co., 275 F. Supp. 3d 1225 (E.D. Wash. 2017) (employee brought action under Federal Employers' Liability Act). It is therefore not "retroactive" or otherwise improper for the Court to apply Fowler's four-part equitable tolling test to Balmuccino's claims.

As a final matter, Balmuccino draws on California's more forgiving tolling law to argue that declining to toll the statutes of limitations during the pendency of the state-court action is bad public policy. Balmuccino may have a point that requiring a plaintiff to concurrently file separate actions in two different jurisdictions is inefficient and laborious. See Dkt. # 28 at 6. Yet this is the tolling policy that Washington has apparently adopted. See Dowell, 36 Wash. App. at 776, 677 P.2d 783 (for statutory tolling under RCW 4.16.170, " '[t]he complaint' is the one filed in the action before the court, not a complaint independently filed."); Abear v. Teveliet, No. C06-5550 RBL, 2006 WL 3813560, at *2 (W.D. Wash. Dec. 21, 2006) ("[RCW 4.16.170] says literally nothing about the effect of a timely, earlier filing on the limitations period applied to a second action regarding the same subject matter."); Fowler, 200 Wash. 2d at 123-25, 515 P.3d 502 ("bad faith, deception or false assurances" by the defendant is a predicate for equitable tolling in Washington). Whatever can be said of the various policy arguments, the Court must follow and apply Washington State's tolling laws, as interpreted by Washington courts, to Balmuccino's claims.

*10 Balmuccino's policy argument is also weakened by its decision not to file suit elsewhere after the California Superior Court dismissed its claims for lack of personal jurisdiction. Even assuming that Balmuccino reasonably asserted personal jurisdiction in California at the outset of litigation, Balmuccino was on notice that it might need to file elsewhere at least as of June 2020, when the California Superior Court dismissed its claims for lack of personal jurisdiction. That Balmuccino knew, or should have known, that it might need to file elsewhere prior to the expiration of the limitations periods lessens the force of its policy argument that it would be unfair or redundant to have to concurrently file multiple suits in multiple jurisdictions.

Aside from arguing that Fowler's four-part equitable tolling test is novel (it is not) and that Washington's tolling law reflects poor public policy, Balmuccino provides no other argument for why it is entitled to equitable tolling under Washington law. The Court therefore must grant Starbucks's motion to dismiss Balmuccino's claims as time-barred, as the assertions of the First Amended Complaint, even when read with the required liberality, do not permit Balmuccino to prove that the statute was tolled. See Jablon, 614 F.2d at 682.

D. Leave to Amend

"As a general rule, when a court grants a motion to dismiss, the court should dismiss the complaint with leave to amend." CyWee Grp. Ltd. v. HTC Corp., 312 F. Supp. 3d 974, 981 (W.D. Wash. 2018); see also Eminence Capital, LLC v. Aspeon, Inc., 316 F.3d 1048, 1051 (9th Cir. 2003) (policy favoring leave to amend should be applied with "extreme liberality"). "In determining whether dismissal without leave to amend is appropriate, courts consider such factors as undue delay, bad faith or dilatory motive on the part of the movant, repeated failure to cure deficiencies by amendments previously allowed, undue prejudice to the opposing party by virtue of allowance of the amendment, and futility of amendment." CyWee Grp. Ltd., 312 F. Supp. 3d at 981 (citing Foman v. Davis, 371 U.S. 178, 182, 83 S.Ct. 227, 9 L.Ed.2d 222 (1962)). "A district court does not err in denying leave to amend where the amendment would be futile." DeSoto v. Yellow Freight Sys., Inc., 957 F.2d 655, 658 (9th Cir. 1992). Similarly, if there are no other facts consistent with the challenged pleading that could possibly cure the deficiency, dismissal with prejudice is appropriate. See Schreiber Distrib. Co. v. Serv-Well Furniture Co., 806 F.2d 1393, 1401 (9th Cir. 1986).

The Court declines to offer further leave to amend. Since Balmuccino's claims are time-barred under Washington law, the Court does not see how Balmuccino could possibly allege other facts to cure this deficiency. Although Balmuccino states that it would be "premature" to bar further amendment, it does not provide any other information to support its claim. See Dkt. # 28 at 12. Thus, the Court finds that granting leave to amend would be futile.

Moreover, two other Foman factors support denying leave to amend: Balmuccino has repeatedly failed to cure deficiencies in its complaint and Starbucks has experienced prejudice based on Balmuccino's undue delays. The Court previously granted Balmuccino leave to amend, but the amended complaint failed to cure these deficiencies. See King v. Select Comfort Corp., 824 F. App'x 532, 533 (9th Cir. 2020) (district court did not abuse its discretion when it dismissed plaintiffs' third amended complaint under Rule 12(b)(6) with prejudice).

And while Balmuccino is correct that Starbucks had timely notice of the suit due to Balmuccino's continuous legal action against Starbucks, Starbucks may still be prejudiced by Balmuccino's delays as well as the fact that multiple years have elapsed since the alleged events occurred. See Mansfield v. Pfaff, No. C14-0948JLR, 2014 WL 3810581, at *4 (W.D. Wash. Aug. 1, 2014) ("Whether there has been 'undue delay' should be considered in the context of (1) the length of the delay measured from the time the moving party obtained relevant facts; (2) whether discovery has closed; and (3) proximity to the trial date.") (citing Texaco, Inc. v. Ponsoldt, 939 F.2d 794, 798–99 (9th Cir. 1991)); see also Morongo Band of Mission Indians v. Rose, 893 F.2d 1074, 1079 (9th Cir. 1990) (Supreme Court found plaintiffs' two-year delay in filing the amended complaint relevant to denying leave to amend); Douchette, 117 Wash. 2d at 813, 818 P.2d 1362 (court found prejudice "arising from the fact that 3 years have elapsed since the events at issue occurred"). Based on these factors, the Court declines to grant leave to amend and dismisses Balmuccino's claims with prejudice.

E. Other Arguments

*11 Besides asserting that Balmuccino's claims are time barred, Starbucks raises two additional grounds for dismissal in its motion. Dkt. # 27 at 7. Starbucks states that the Court should: (1) dismiss Balmuccino's common-law breach of confidence claim (third cause of action), as it is preempted under the Washington UTSA; and (2) strike Balmuccino's request for punitive damages because the requested punitive damages are not recognized under Washington law. Id. Because the Court is dismissing all of Balmuccino's claims on timeliness grounds, it need not address Starbucks's additional arguments.

IV

CONCLUSION

For the reasons above, the Court GRANTS Starbucks's Motion to Dismiss (Dkt. #27) and DISMISSES Balmuccino's First Amended Complaint with prejudice.

All Citations

Not Reported in Fed. Supp., 2023 WL 4761447

Footnotes

- The FAC refers to Gelman's assistant as both "Ginsburg" and "Ginsberg." Without clear guidance, the Court will refer to him as "Ginsburg" for consistency.
- Despite its discussion of California's and Washington's statutory tolling policies, Balmuccino does not allege, and therefore has not shown, that there is an actual conflict with respect to California's and Washington's statutory tolling policies. See generally Dkt. # 28. The Court therefore does not address this issue.
- Balmuccino is correct that California recognizes a tort of breach of confidence. See Dkt. # 28 at 10; see also Faris v. Enberg, 97 Cal. App. 3d 309, 321, 158 Cal.Rptr. 704 (1979). But while California courts continue to recognize the tort, California's UTSA still preempts breach of confidence claims if, as here, they are based on the same nucleus of facts as a trade secret misappropriation claim. See K.C. Multimedia, Inc. v. Bank of Am. Tech. & Operations, Inc., 171 Cal. App. 4th 939, 960, 90 Cal.Rptr.3d 247 (2009) (finding appellant's breach of confidence claim preempted by their trade secret misappropriation claim).
- Balmuccino also asserts that Fowler's "bad actor" requirement is new and thus "should not be retroactively applied" to its claims. See Dkt. # 28 at 8. This argument, however, misunderstands Washington case law, as Fowler merely reiterates the four-part test for equitable tolling established in Millay, 135 Wash. 2d at 206, 955 P.2d 791. See Fowler, 200 Wash. 2d at 120, 515 P.3d 502; see also Section III.C(3).

- The complaint asserts that the parties entered an "implied-in-fact" contract and an "oral contract," not that the parties formally signed a written contract. Dkt. # 23 at 5–7.
- The FAC provides two potential dates for when Balmuccino allegedly learned of Starbucks's trade secret misappropriation: 2018 (discovery that Starbucks contacted one of its suppliers) and April 2019 (discovery of the Sip Kit launch). Dkt. # 23 at 3. Balmuccino does not specify which date it wishes the Court to use for the purposes of this motion. See generally id.; see also Dkt. # 28. But even under the more generous reading of the complaint (i.e., assuming that Starbucks's misconduct was discovered in April 2019), all of Balmuccino's claims are time-barred under the applicable statutes of limitations as the three-year period would have lapsed in April 2022 and this action was not filed until October 2022.
- Balmuccino is also not entitled to equitable tolling for its federal claim (trade secret misappropriation under the DTSA) based on federal tolling law. Balmuccino did not raise its federal claim until March 9, 2023, at least 11 months after the statute of limitations expired. Compare Dkt. # 23 at 11, with Dkt. # 1, and Balmuccino, 2022 WL 3643062. As Balmuccino's federal claim was untimely, and federal equitable tolling principles do not extend to "garden variety claim[s] of excusable neglect," see Irwin v. Dep't of Veterans Affairs, 498 U.S. 89, 96, 111 S.Ct. 453, 112 L.Ed.2d 435 (1990), Balmuccino is not entitled to relief based on the federal equitable tolling doctrine.

End of Document

© 2024 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.